The Pansy Legend.

A pretty fable about the pansy is current in France and Germany. In most pansies, especially of the earlier and less highly developed varieties, two of the five petals are plain in color and three are gray. They represent a family, consisting of husband, wife and four daughters, two of the latter being step-children of the wife. The plain petals are the step-children, with only one child—this is, one sepal—between them. The two small gray petals are the daughters, with a chair each; and the large gray petal is the wife with two chairs. To find the father one must strip away the petals until the stamens and pistils are bare. They have a fanciful resemblance to an old man with a funnel wrap about his neck, his shoulders upraised, and his feet in a bathtub. The story is probably of French origin because the French call the pansy the stepmother.

Plan to Fight Disease.

Druggists Will Battle Stomach Troubles in Norway.

The increase of stomach troubles in Norway has led Frank Kimball, proprietor of the Noyes Drug Store, to take effective measures to combat the disease. He has the local agency for M-I-O-N-A stomach tablets, and in order to induce people suffering with weak stomach or indigestion to use the remedy, offers to supply it with the distinct understanding that money will be refunded in every case where it does not cure.

M-I-O-N-A is not a mere digestive, but an absolute strengthener and builder-up of the whole digestive tract. "If you suffer with headaches, giddiness, palpitation, bad taste in the mouth, nervousness, coated tongue, distress after eating, use M-I-O-N-A and see how quickly these symptoms of a weak stomach will disappear. The remedy strengthens the muscular walls of the stomach and increases the flow of gastric juices so that nourishment is extracted from the food and the refuse is expelled without the aid of purgative or laxative medicines.

Remember that Frank Kimball, proprietor of the Noyes Drug Store, gives a guarantee to refund the money unless it cures. He takes all the risk, and there is no danger of your losing anything except indigestion when you buy a 50-cent box of M-I-O-N-A.

NORTH BRIDGTON.

Bridgton Academy.

The announcement recently made by the trustees of Bridgton Academy to the effect that the legacy of $10,000 which was left by the late George Ingalls, and which has been in litigation for some time, is now practically assured to the academy, will be of interest to the many friends of the institution.

Bridgton has just received a formal challenge from Hebron for a joint public debate. The question, while not publicly announced, is understood to deal with some phase of the liquor question. The members of the debating team from Bridgton will be chosen by contests.

How Many Miles Do You Dance?

The latest craze from London has reached the dancing sets of all the large cities of this country and every one who is "in the know" now dances to the merry tick, tick of a pedometer.

The average dance is about eight minutes and a mile is easily danced during that time. An encore ranges from three to four minutes and half a mile is usually covered in that time. So the popular girl who never has to "wait against the wall and try to look at ease" and has every dance taken on a program of 18 dances, and also endures, can proudly boast that she has been able to "cover 20 miles in an evening."

John Smith and family are to move from their home in Bridgton village to the very near future to East Denmark, where they will take up their residence on the "Biney" Whitney farm recently purchased by Charles E. Cobb. This farm, some few years ago, was bought by William Potter. Mr. Potter sold the standing timber and has a few months ago disposed of the farm and buildings to E. Cobb. Mr. Cobb has purchased a strip of the standing pine near the shore of Moose Pond and he will erect a camp for girls there, to be conducted in connection with his other camps.

"Home" is the name usually applied to a small, cosy house; "residence" to a large and more pretentious place. Often times the distinction goes farther than the name and into the very nature of the inhabitants.

Maine Boy Made Good.

How His Dream of a Railroad of His Own With Yellow Cars Came True.

A boy's dream that came true is the reason why all the cars on Henry M. Flagler's Florida East Coast railroad are painted yellow. The boy used to live in the town of Oxford in Maine, and at his old home there he would sit by the hour and watch the trains go by, for the town was so small that few stopped. He would dream of the time when he would be a man, and declare to himself that some day he would have a railroad and all the cars should be painted yellow.

For the boy was born to be a railroad man, although he did not find it out for a good many years. His name was Joseph R. Parrott and he grew up like thousands of other boys in other country towns, who also have their own dreams. In time he went to college, to Yale, where he made a name for himself in the sports and the campus life of that institution. He rowed in the crews from '82 to '85 and was known as one of the best boxers in college. That was before the day of football supremacy.

On graduating he decided to take up the practice of law in the state of Florida where connection offered with a firm of attorneys who were counsel for the Jacksonville, Tampa & Key West railway. The leading member of the firm was of the school who thought offensive litigation necessary to demonstrate the use of a legal department to a railroad. Mr. Parrott, being of an aggressive nature, tried more cases in eighteen months than ten other lawyers in the county together.

In the year 1888 he was appointed counsel for the road, and after the yellow fever epidemic of 1889 he became general counsel. At this time the Jacksonville, Tampa & Key West was merged with the Florida Southern system, controlled by Henry M. Flagler, and the next year the combined systems went in the hands of a receiver. Mr. Parrott was appointed receiver for the Florida Southern and here, in the handling of this system, he gained his first experience as a practical railroad administrator. The receivership did not last long, for Mr. Flagler succeeded in withdrawing his railroad from the combination and in June, 1892, Mr. Parrott resigned as receiver and became vice-president and general counsel of the Flagler road also of the East Coast Canal company.

One of the first acts of the new receiver was to order all the cars painted a shade of yellow that borders coral on orange. Mr. Flagler has since often spoken to his friends of the "determination of that man Parrott," and related the story of the small boy in Maine who had been told him by a friend some years before.

In April, 1894, the Florida East Coast railway was extended as far south as Palm Beach, and so well pleased was Mr. Flagler with the work of "that man Parrott" that he made him vice-president and general manager of all his Florida undertakings.

The Florida East Coast Hotel company was formed in 1897, and three years later Mr. Parrott also took active charge of this enterprise. His active presence and brought about changes which have since placed the hotels operated by the company on a paying basis. In 1901 he became president of still another Flagler organization, the Peninsular & Occidental Steamship company, which operates the transportation lines of the East Coast system.

As vice-president and general manager of the Florida East Coast railway, Mr. Parrott for the past three years has had the absolute charge of the construction of the extension of the road from Miami to Key West. This work has been one of great difficulty for many ocean channels have to be crossed in carrying the road through the Florida Keys, and the task is unlike any ever before attempted by the railroad engineers. It has been pronounced second only to the Panama canal in importance as an engineering feat. Yet so energetically has the construction been hurried on that the road is already completed over two-thirds of the way, a year ahead of the date set in the plans.

Mr. Flagler now tells his friends that "that man Parrott will soon have my yellow cars running into Key West and from there by ferry to Cuba, but I will wager a guess that the greatest dream of his youth, those visions of his boyhood days." —Portland Press.

Graft in High Places.

While all the talk is being made about graft and rebate and other forms of polite robbery, perhaps it would be a good plan for somebody, if there is anybody who would do it, to investigate the graft of members of the United States senate.

The list of expenses of the senate shows that the government paid for 500 thousands of telegrams sent to private business, ink enough to give them all a bath, playing cards, corkscrews, mineral water, safety razors, razor blades, hand bags, pocket books, rubber shoes, and a variety of other things that apparently have not a great deal to do with the business of the government.

The total expense of the senate was over $1,640,000 and if it isn't a case of graft it is hard saying what it is. The senate needs an auditor. It is not reasonable to expect legislative officials to be honest and economical while senators are acting, such an example of robbery.—Gardiner Reporter Journal.

The Old and New Way

Some Important Facts Which May Prove Helpful.

Thirty years ago old-fashioned cod liver oil had to be forced down a patient's throat. Invalids couldn't take it, and children wouldn't. But the doctors prescribed it, and it had to be taken by force. Yet it cured people where nothing could time. So the popular girl who never has to "wait against the wall and try to look at ease" and has every dance taken on a program of 18 dances, and also endures, can proudly boast that she has been able to "cover 20 miles in an evening."

We are now anxious to have every one know that Vinol is a new form of this very old and valuable remedy containing in a concentrated form all the medicinal elements of cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers, but by an extractive and concentrating process it is made without oil or grease, and it is as delicious to the taste as a fresh orange.

Vinol does not upset the stomach like old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions; its strengthening and healing properties are remarkable, and both doctors and patients are delighted with its action.

Many wonderful cures right here in Norway have been effected by its use, and we ask all of our customers to try Vinol on our guarantee to return money, every time it fails to make rich, red blood, increase the appetite, cure stomach troubles, give strength and new vitality to the aged, run-down, tired and debilitated, or cure chronic colds, hacking coughs or bronchitis. Fryeburg

In E. D. H.'s. White Mountain Incidents

Where the hunter of the Deer and the warrior find.

Fryeburg was, in early times, the principal, and in fact, the only village of the White Mountains. It was, for long years the center from whence came all the fashions, and to which tended all the trade.

Its favorable situation, in respect to the seaboard towns, and the rapidity with which the village grew, gave it great prominence in its early days. Its one long street was then a busy scene of bustle and activity. Unlike most of our villages it sprang up in a comparatively few years, to its full size. It stands on a broad, level plain, slightly elevated above the intervals of the Saco, which enclose it in one of its huge folds. On a broad, straight, beautiful street the village is principally built.

The "old Province of Maine" says William, the king had no right to give it away. But, in violation to all right, he did give to Gen. Joseph Fryer a grant of land since called Fryeburg, from its grantee, Gen. Fryer had been an officer in the king's army, and received the grant in consideration of his gallant deeds on the frontier. On his return he was presented with an elegant silver mounted sword and tankard.

The grant was made in 1792. The conditions were that he should give bond to the province treasurer to have the township with sixty good families, each of which should have built within the term of five years, a good house, twenty feet by eighteen, and cleared seven acres of pasture or tillage. He should reserve one sixteenth of the township for a parsonage forever, one sixteenth for a school for the poor, one sixteenth for Harvard College forever.

In the fall of 1793, influenced by the glowing representations of Gen. Fryer, came Samuel Osgood, Moses Eames, John Evans and Jedediah Spring from Concord N. H. Their path was through the woods for sixty or seventy miles. For this distance no friendly house of entertainment on the way, in which to rest their weary limbs, or satisfy the demands of hunger—no not even the hut of a humble peasant could they see.

These were they who encountered the hardships, the fatigues, the sufferings attendant on the first settlers of a land so remote from the benefits of knowledge and refinement—who established themselves in the bosom of an extensive wilderness, and constituted the first civil family on the desolate plain. In this romantic retreat, from these small beginnings, a beautiful village has arisen.

To those venerable fathers; to those worthy mothers, who with heroic will, age, and fortitude of soul, set hardships and dangers defiance, who raised with fostering care, a race of hardy sons and daughters; to their spirit of patriotism we are indebted, next to Divine Providence, for the enjoyment of this goodly land.

This town settled very rapidly. Among the long list of proprietors we find the name of that almost ubiquitous person, Oliver Peabody, who seems to have a hand in settling most of the towns about the mountains. A deed of rights of sixty-fourths be obtained; one sixty fourth better off than those who helped to settle only this town.

This was a favorite resort of the Indians, and for many years after the dispersion of the Pequigewit tribe, solitary members lingered around their old home. Philip, Sabatis, Tom Hegon and Swanson are familiar names with the old people.

Sabatis was a great favorite with the whites. He was a little timid with all and the sudden appearance of a wild animal, especially during the last years of his life would set his teeth to chattering quills merrily. One of his hydroptic tricks was swimming around the cakes of ice, as they came down the Saco in the cold waters of spring, diving among them and coming up crying, "See other! See other!" The boys admired old Sabatis.

Philip joined the American army during the revolution. Swanson was of such service to the American cause that he was presented with an elegant sword.

The tragical end of Tom Hegon is remembered by many old people in Maine to this day. He joined the English and was engaged in many bloody massacres. He was tied upon a horse with spurs on his heels. When the horse was set at liberty, he ran furiously through an orchard, and crazy limbs tore him to pieces. Rather hard lines, but he was a bloody devil.

The first precursor of Fryeburg Academy was Paul Langdon. Few ever left it leaving behind them a higher reputation for intellect and mental acquirements. He bid fair to mark a brilliant course in life. But the destroyer often fingers around the fairest flower. It was so in his case. The habit of drink darkened his prospects, and checked his opening career of greatness.

Daniel Webster succeeded him, when he taught for nine months. Of him we need say but little here, as the world is full of his life. That little shall be that comparatively his success as a teacher was much inferior to that in the law and in the forum. He was eminent in the latter sphere, but just respectable in the former. If he had pursued the business of instructing, as the occupation of his life, we should probably never heard of him much beyond the precincts of the schoolroom.—[News and Sentinel.

Japs Never Take Cold.

With the approach of chilly weather people are becoming fearful lest they should take cold after a hot bath, but this opinion is unable to reconcile itself with the immunity of the Japanese from colds.

The ordinary bath consists of a large wooden tub oval in shape and fitted with a cover. Before he enters the tub the bather thoroughly lathers himself from head to foot and washes the suds off by means of a wooden ladle or dipper. He then sits in the tub, immersed up to his chin, for several minutes, enduring a degree of heat by which a European would be well nigh parboiled.

When Japan first began to study the methods of Western nations the excessive heat of the baths was strongly condemned and a law was made that the water in the public baths should be only moderately heated. This caused great discontent, so a committee composed of European and Japanese medical men was appointed to decide the question. The verdict was pronounced to be not only harmless but beneficial.

The high temperature of the water was said to open the pores of the skin thoroughly, even without the use of soap, and a healthy action of the skin and cleanliness were said to be which it was impossible to get with any amount of washing in cold or so-called hot baths.

When You Take Cold
One way is to pay no attention to it; at least not until it develops into pneumonia, or bronchitis, or pleurisy. Another way is to ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. If he says, "The best thing for colds," then take it. Do as he says, anyway.

We publish our formulas. We banish alcohol from our medicines. We turn you to consult your doctor.

An Animal Story For Little Folks
RARE JUSTICE

Bunny Rabbit went one day last week to rob Mr. Coon's corncrib, and Mr. Coon caught him in the very act.

"I'll march you off to jail, sir, and that's what I'll do with you!"

"Oh, don't march me off to jail! Anything but that! I know I ought to be killed. Throw me in the river, drown me, but don't march me off to jail!" pleaded Bunny Rabbit.

"All right," said old man Coon. "But if I throw you in the river you'll swim out. I know you. That's what you'll do."

"I was just coming to that," said Bunny Rabbit. "I was just going to ask you to tie my hands behind my back, so I couldn't swim a stroke. I'm afraid when I get in that cold water I might try to swim, and so I want you to tie me."

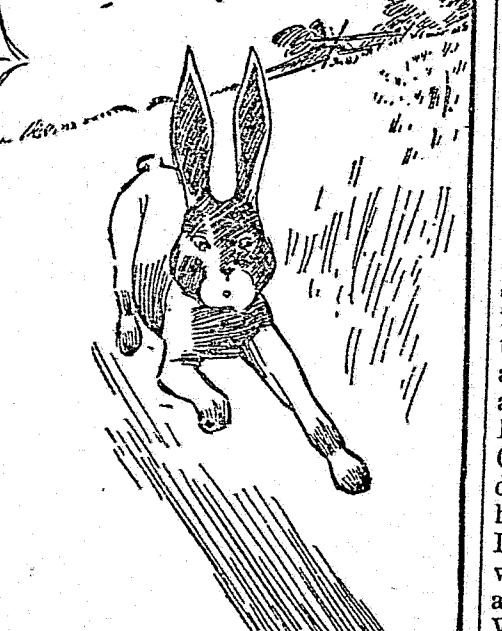

Old man Coon thought he never had seen such a repentant rabbit in all his days. There was something suspicious about it, but he tied Master Bunny Rabbit's paws hard and fast. Then Bunny Rabbit stood on the bank of the river and wept, and the tears dropped down his furry little cheeks, and his paws were tied so he couldn't wipe them away. Oh, he was a piteous spectacle!

"Go up to the top of that high hill," said he, "and run down just as fast as you can and give me a good shove away out into the middle of the water, so I will drown quick."

Mr. Coon went up and ran, but Bunny Rabbit's hind feet were not tied, and when Mr. Coon got to him Bunny stepped to one side. Splash went old man Coon into the water.

"Oh, save me! Save me, Brother Bunny Rabbit!" cried Mr. Coon, who could not swim, was helpless with fear.—Atlanta Constitution.

BARNYARD MANURE.

Things That Affect Its Quantity and Quality as Plant Food.

By F. R. SHUTT, Canada.

The composition of barnyard manure—in other words, its value as a direct supplier of plant nutrition—will depend not only upon the relative proportions of solid and liquid excreta and litter making up the whole, but also upon certain factors affecting the two former—first, the kind; second, the food; third, the age; fourth, the condition and function of the animal producing it.

Considering the farm stock, horses, cows, pigs and sheep, other things being equal, the analysis of the fresh solid excreta of these animals places the manure in the following order of value: Sheep, pigs, horses, cows.

The urine of the sheep is seen to be the most valuable, containing the largest amount of nitrogen and potash. That of the horse ranks next, with the cow's and pig's following in the order named. The urine of animals is much richer in nitrogen and potash than the solid excrements, but it is practically destitute of phosphoric acid.

Food is by far the most important factor in determining the fertilizing value of both solid and liquid excreta. The richer the food in albuminoids, or flesh formers, the richer will the manure be in nitrogen. The same is true as regards phosphoric acid and potash.

As the quality and quantity of the solid food affect the amount and composition of the excrements, so does the amount of water drunk. The more water that the animal takes the poorer or more dilute will be the urine, but the inferior quality will be largely compensated for by the increased quantity voided.

Young and growing animals absorb a much larger percentage of the fertilizing constituents of their food than do those that are mature or full grown. Stated approximately, we may say that from 50 to 75 per cent of the nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash of the food of the former will be found in the manure, from 90 to 95 per cent in that of the latter.

According to the wants or requirements of the animal, so is the quality of the resulting manure. The production of milk, flesh and wool makes a heavy demand upon the food, so that the manure of animals manufacturing these is not performing these functions.

Mature animals at rest return practically all the fertilizing constituents in milk, utilize about 25 per cent of the plant food elements in their diet, and their manure is consequently less rich than that from fattening steers, which do not retain more than 10 per cent of such constituents.

HARRISON.

Friday, Jan. 24, was a red letter day for Lakeside grange, it being the occasion of the installation of officers by State Master Stetson who was accompanied on his visit to Harrison by Past Master Gardner.

The forenoon meeting was a business session, with a few remarks at the close by visiting brothers from Highland, Bear Mountain, Sweden and Crooked River granges. A bountiful dinner was served at noon and about 175 hungry patrons did ample justice to it.

In the afternoon the following officers were installed by State Master Stetson, assisted by Brother and Sister Monroe of Waterford:

Mr. John W. Nevers.
O. J. Arthur Chabourne.
Michael E. Thomas.
L. Lewis F. Briggs.
A. S. Harry E. Smith.
Chap. Charles E. Smith.
Treas. James P. Black.
Sec. Bertha M. Nevers.
Past Master Geo. H. Hill.
Cores—Mrs. Edna A. Thomas.
Pomona—Mrs. Melissa D. Chute.
Flora—Mrs. L. A. May.
L. A. May E. Furlington.

The installation ceremonies were carried out in full, including the floor work at the commencement, which was well carried out.

Following the installation was a short literary entertainment, consisting of music by the orchestra, recitation by Harry E. Smith and a brief discussion of the following question: "Resolved, That farming offers greater inducements to our young men than any other occupation."

Next came the best part of the meeting, speeches by Brothers Stetson and Gardner. The speech of the State Master was earnest and aggressive, pledging to the order his whole time and best efforts for the two years to come. He spoke of the importance of discussing live questions even if they were political, avoiding partisan politics.

Past Master Geo. H. Hill spoke in a usual happy vein, and in a practical way, briefly discussing one or two points in regard to the tariff, strictly on the lines laid down by National Master Batchelder.

Lakeside starts the new year in good shape, opening with this successful meeting, and having a class of four to start in at the next meeting. The lecturer, who is a very bright young lady, has prepared an attractive printed program for the coming year, and it is safe to say there will be something doing at every meeting of this grange for the year to come.

Dugway, stating complaints which have reached the department of delay in the delivery of mail and hardships imposed upon rural carriers while serving their routes, due to the practice of patrons placing loose coins in their hands for the purchase of stamps each time they desire to despatch letters, and they are urged hereafter to provide themselves in advance with as liberal supply of stamps as circumstances will permit. So all letters must be stamped before rural carriers will be obliged to take them from the boxes.

He had been prominently identified with the Northern Western, Shenoygan, Fond du Lac, Michigan Central, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, Kansas, Watertown & Ogdensburg, New York Central and Vermont Central.

He is survived by an aged mother, Mrs. Lucy H. Emerson, a widow, two sons and a daughter.

A Pet That's the Real Thing.
A. H. Eastman of Berlin, N. H., has at his home a fine alligator about one foot in length, which he brought from the South on his return from Florida recently. He is a very cunning pet and is only taken food once a week. Although he is but a few months old, he knows his name (Sambo) and will come when called. When he arrived from the South he was in a warm room for a few hours he became very lively.

Mr. Eastman would be very glad to exhibit this alligator to anyone desirous of seeing it, as he is very anxious of establishing the idea of having alligators for pets instead of cats and dogs. Although this alligator is very small now, he comes from a species whose size is very large, some being from 12 to 15 feet in length and whose weight is from six to eight hundred pounds, so that no one need be deterred from getting one of these small alligators for pets on account of the size as in time they will attain any size desired.

The Woman's club of Lovell will give the drama, "Because I Love You," at Pine Grove hall, Thursday evening, Feb. 6, followed by a social dance. Cast of characters:

HOUSE WORK

Thousands of American women in our homes are daily sacrificing their lives to duty.

In order to keep the home neat and pretty, the children well dressed and tidy, women overdo. A female weakness or displacement is often brought on and they suffer in silence, drifting along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have help to overcome the pains and aches which daily make life a burden.

It is to these faithful women that LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND comes as a boon and a blessing, as it did to Mrs. F. Ellsworth, of Mayville, N. Y., and to Mrs. W. P. Boyd, of Beaver Falls, Pa., who say:

"I was not able to do my own work owing to the female trouble from which I suffered. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully, and I am so well that I can do as big a day's work as I ever did. I wish every sick woman would try it."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.
For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Portland's Second Fire Within a Week.

Portland had another fire early Monday morning in which Milliken, Cousens, Thorne Co. and others were the losers. Loss more than a million dollars. Milliken, Cousens & Co. is one of the leading dry goods firms of New England and its commercial life dates back of the big fire of 1866. The first firm name was Deering, Milliken & Co., the concern opening its doors for business in 1865. This is of more than passing interest to one of its founders, was a South Paris boy.

Mr. Deering is now 82 years of age, but still vigorous and, while he no longer has an active interest in the Deering Harvester Co., which he made one of the greatest commercial enterprises in the country, he keeps in touch with the business world, and his judgment is often sought by the younger men who have succeeded him.

He lives in Evanston, Ill., and spends his summers at Paw Paw lake, Michigan, and while he is worth millions he is modest in his tastes, unassuming in his ways and kindly and approachable to all who have any call to see him.

He was born in South Paris and along in 1842 when he was about 13 years of age, he was working in a woolen mill sorting wool at wages of eight dollars and board a month. He spent seven years in the growing establishment, and in those seven years took in a saw mill and a general store, the saw mill driven by the same water power that turned the spindles in the other plant.

From wool sorting to the machinery buying—and at 22 years old, to the agency of the factory, was the boy's progress.

At 23 years old he was married and with Seth Milliken, a few years later came to Portland, establishing the dry goods commission house of Deering, Milliken & Co.

His first wife was Abby Barbour, a Maine woman, to whom he was married in 1849. The one son of the union is Charles Deering. The mother dying soon afterward, Mr. Deering was married on Dec. 12, 1856, to Clara Hamilton, and on Dec. 16, 1906, celebrated the golden anniversary of the wedding. The two children of this union are James Deering and Abby, who died in 1906, the wife of Richard E. Howe. The two sons and the son-in-law are active in the International Harvester Co. of the present day.

According to John F. Steward, a veteran of the harvester manufacturing business, William Deering owes his millions to the fact that he was born with "finger" fingers—fingers cultivated in sorting wool in the little South Paris factory when they later knew binder twice.

Written for the Advertiser.
The Story of My Shakespearian Landlord.

By CHARLES W. STEVENS.
"What? 'Yes! Oh! Sonborn of the ADVERTISER! Good morning! Chilly, isn't it? The history of my Shakespearian Boniface? Oh! I believe I did half promise it. As you want it I will send it along soon."
My part of conversation over the 'phone as instanced above occurred some week or so ago, and as Editor Sonborn knows what he wants I will condense the history of my friend of a night and contribute it to his wide awake paper.
I will let my venerable host tell his own story omitting his "quotations" and other trifling digressions. Lighting his pipe, as the smoke curled upward, fixing his eyes upon a skull resting like Poe's raven upon the library top he began:
"I was born in Stratford-on-Avon some seventy-five years ago, about the time of your famous Declaration of Independence and nearly as many years before your distinguished author, Washington Irving wrote his charming sketch of the immortal bard."
And here let the writer of this story interrupt his host for a few moments.
When visiting Stratford-on-Avon with my wife and daughter some years since we naturally selected the "Red Horse Inn" made famous by Irving for his sketch while visiting Shakespeare's birthplace. I asked the Landlord if he could give us the room Irving occupied while here.
"Oh, yes, certainly. All you Americans want to sleep in that room."
The next morning while talking of the beauties of the place and its historical associations with several compatriots, I remarked that we had the pleasure of occupying the room Irving had when there. A smile went round as each instantly replied, "So did I." Which showed, withal, that our distinguished and genial author like many of his kindred must have had a very restless disposition.
This reminds me that in our visit to several museums on the continent we were shown the skull of Attilus. When for the fourth time our attention was called to this valuable relic, I remarked that we had already seen Irving's.
"Ah, yes," remarked the ready curator, "but this is his skull when a youth."
"My father," resumed my host, "was a physician who had acquired a fair fortune in his profession. It was his wish that I should succeed him, and I was educated at Oxford and completed my medical studies in that venerable college town. My mother died in my youth and my father, while one day mixing some chocolate for an experiment, caused an explosion which resulted in his death.
Thus at an early age I found myself almost alone in the world as I had but few relatives.
"About this time I became engaged to a young lady whose acquaintance I had made while pursuing my medical studies at Oxford, and it is because of your present journeyings under somewhat similar conditions that I am tempted for the first time in my life to relate my somewhat romantic history. Our marriage day was fixed upon when I found that a supposed friend, a college acquaintance, was rivaling me in my choice and being somewhat better off in this world goods than myself, persuaded my fickle inamorata to break her engagement with me. Feeling that my life with such a fickle person would have been far from a happy one, I should have let the matter drop had not I heard from a friend that my rival had made very insulting remarks about me.
"This added injury, if the other could be called one, was more than my sensitive nature could withstand and I immediately challenged my rival to fight a duel. Duelling in those days you must remember was considered a proper redress for an insult and was a very common occurrence. My challenge was accepted and my adversary, being the challenged party, had the choice of weapons. He chose pistols and as we both wished to avoid publicity decided to fight without seconds. We were to stand back to back, advance six paces, at the word ready, turning and firing.
"At the first shot I was hit in my left arm, a slight wound. My antagonist fell to the ground. I instantly rushed to him and at once saw that he was mortally wounded, in fact after a few moments he breathed his last. God knows I had expected no such serious result and for a short time my feelings overcame me. But now what was to be done was the immediate matter to be considered. It was all important that the unexpected fatality should be kept concealed from his friends and mine.
"As the affair took place in a secluded spot I was able to hide the body until night. I then dismembered it, carried the remains to my office undiscovered and by means known to all medical professors soon removed all traces of it.
But not the deed from my consciousness. I had killed a man, broken that divine command of Moses on the Mount, "Thou shalt not kill," and from that moment I determined to make restitution by devoting my life to the saving of that which I had destroyed.
"Having no special reasons to keep me at home and much for leaving it, I immediately packed a few of my belongings and under an assumed name took passage by ship from Liverpool to New York. I was standing by the rail of the ship when the captain came on board.
I noticed that he had been drinking but apparently not to excess. We sailed with a fair wind but much to my surprise the captain showed unmistakable signs of continuing his potations and in about a week the first officer informed me that he was confined to his berth by a serious attack of delirium tremens.
"At once went to him and nursed him according to the best of my medical ability and when he seemed to be in a fair state of recovery, I left him for a few moments to go to the cook's galley for some light food. As I turned to retrace my steps I saw him come up the cabin stairs, rush to the stern of the ship and plunge into the sea.
"We instantly hove to and sent out boats but as the ship had been sailing under a stiff, favorable breeze no trace of the unfortunate man could be found.
Our first officer was a temporary substitute and knew but little of navigation.
While in college I had pursued the study to some extent and was soon able to fix our latitude and longitude and finally after a fair passage of thirty days the ship was brought safely into New York.
"I immediately reported to the ship's owners and was offered a substantial reward for my services. I refused accepting any more than my passage money and that beautiful silver vase you have probably noticed in the mantle.
Through their influence I soon obtained a situation in a hospital where I remained until the breaking out of the war of 1852.

"Thinking here was the chance partly to atone for the taking of life by saving it, through the same influence I obtained the appointment of surgeon on board the U. S. ship of war Enterprise. My services were soon called into requisition for after being at sea for a short time we met in Casco Bay off the city of Portland, Me., H. M. S. Boxer. We were immediately engaged and the result was a victory for the Enterprise. In my medical capacity I was able to alleviate much suffering and perhaps in preserving life, although among the killed outright was a lieutenant of each ship."
I again interrupted the recital to say that I was born in Portland and then residing there, that I had often visited the simple memorials of the two officers who lay side by side in the Eastern cemetery of that city—two brick structures covered with a slate upon which were chiseled appropriate inscriptions.
"After the war was over," he resumed
"I went to Cuba and being conversant with the Spanish language, was soon able to secure a position as medical director on a large sugar plantation. Not long after assuming the position the scourge, the yellow fever, and I was an early victim. Fortunately my case was not a severe one and I soon recovered.
Being then immune I resumed my duties and by this means was instrumental in the saving of many lives.
"After remaining there a number of years I went to Mexico where I practiced my profession and with what means I had accumulated invested in a silver mine which proved very successful. There I remained for some twenty years. Upon feeling a disposition to return to England, for a time at least, I took passage by ship for San Francisco.
I found the Pacific, pacific only in name, but after a boisterous voyage we reached that harbor in safety. This was some ten years before the discovery of gold in California and the town was small and the bay almost deserted.
"After a short stay I took the overland stage for Chicago. Our long and somewhat dangerous journey was in safety though we had several skirmishes with small bands of Indians and once being nearly stampeded by a herd of buffalo which almost surrounded us, and speaking of which, I did ever hear of my Yorkshire countryman who one winter visited your city through the building of the Grand Trunk railroad?
Wishing to indulge in a sleigh ride he asked his landlord to procure him a team.
"Will you drive yourself?"
"Oh! certainly," was the reply.
"John," said his host, "order a good warm sleigh and tell the man to put in a couple of buffaloes."
"Buffaloes! Oses, sir, Oses, is what I want."
"After tarrying awhile at Chicago, he then but an insignificant town I determined to make the visit to my old home and proceeding to Boston took passage on the Cunard Steamship Britannia on the third day of February, 1844. It was the coldest winter for many years and the harbor and some distance down the bay was so thickly frozen that a passage with the little craft had to be cut from the steamer dock to the open sea, to enable her to pass out.
"While abroad through my old acquaintance, John Murry, the celebrated London bookseller, I purchased the library of the late Thomas Scott you see about you. Returning I selected this spot as being somewhat in its natural scenery not unlike my native town;
I had this cottage builded for me, furnished it, procuring a good housekeeper and servants, put up my sign, and I might not be wholly devoid of company, and here you found me among my books, leading a quiet, wholesome life, and here I expect to end my days which I cannot be many. I may well taken care of and after, as you have heard, a busy and rather adventurous life I wait patiently the end and hope to meet it as one of your own poets so beautifully speaks of death:
"Like one who wraps the drapery of his
about him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.
"And no 'To bed, to sleep, O gentle sleep, chief nourisher in life's flight." I never saw my eccentric but lovable host after my return with my "blushing bride," but I have no doubt that having endeavored to atone for his one early act his end was as peaceful as his birth.

The Devil of Debt.
Did you ever make friends with a devil?
People do.
One of the most vicious devils of the lot is the one we are thinking of today—
the Devil of Debt.
You may judge what a character he is from the message left by a respected man who jumped from a steamer into Long Island sound and drowned himself, first having scribbled these words: "For 20 years the devil of debt has been on my heels, and I have given up." We become well acquainted with various devils, but there isn't any devil who can claim a larger circle of really intimate friends than this one.
The clerk, he's in debt. The bookkeeper, he's in debt. The salesman, they're all in debt. The elevator man, of course he is. The porter, well rather.
As for the superintendent, he can scarcely remember when he wasn't. The manager, you wouldn't think it of him, but he's the worst of all. So he gets $5000 a year, but he spent this year's salary year before last, and you wouldn't envy him very much if you could see him after the stenographer has gone out, trying to satisfy this bank, and staying that one of the other 60 days, and fighting for another thousand or so on that mortgaged lot in the suburbs. Sure the family know all about it, too, but don't
they have to set a decent table, and entertain a little, goodness knows, and from that of the other 60 days, and fighting for another thousand or so on that mortgaged lot in the suburbs. Sure the
family know all about it, too, but don't
they have to set a decent table, and

Mrs. Record's maiden name was Christina Bailey and she was the last of a large family. She leaves four children: Martin Record of Poland, William Record and Mrs. H. L. Holmes of Auburn and Mrs. Charles Penney of Lewiston.

A certain lady of this town living not more than a mile from the post-office was married about five years ago to a fish lover. During the last year, however, her spouse has appeared somewhat neglectful. One night not long ago his wife said to him, "You do not speak as affectionately to me as you used to. I fear you have ceased to love me."

"Ceased to love you?" growled the man, "there you go again. Ceased to love? Now shut up and let me read the paper."

Man-shall-eallim; or What is It?
The northern part of the town was thrown into consternation, last week, by the report that tracks of some huge monster had been seen in different parts of the Swift's Corner neighborhood.

Several examined the imprints left by its gigantic feet and decided that fame if not fortune awaited the man who could catch the animal alive. Accordingly a posse of men started out duly armed with repeaters, automatics, etc., to find fresh tracks.

After some hours spent in a futile search new tracks were found at the foot of Carter's mountain and an eager and excited but cautious party took the trail.

For a long time it wandered through the dense undergrowth at the base of the mountain, then crossed the Carter place and took to the woods belonging to Oscar Cox, from there across the Hobbs and Merriam lands where it crossed the road into Clarence Austin and Horace Hussey's.

In Horace's lot were found several trees which it had felled. There it took to the open and went straight to Hussey's front door. Knowing that further search would be useless the baffled men measured the tracks which were sixteen inches long by seven.

At 8 o'clock, Friday evening, Feb. 7, the young people of Swift's Corner will present at the schoolhouse the three-act comedy, "The Doctor." No charge will be made for admission but each lady is requested to bring a pie which will be sold at auction immediately after the play. Each lady who does not bring a pie and each gentleman who does not bid off one will have to pay a fine which is guaranteed not to bankrupt anyone even in these hard times.
